Gender pay and bonus gap

	MEAN	MEDIAN
HOURLY PAY	24%	20%
BONUS	37%	42%

The hourly gender pay gap is the difference between the average hourly pay rate for males and females for the month of April 2024 expressed as a % of the male average. The bonus pay gap is the difference between the average of all bonuses, including commissions, paid to male and female employees in the 12 months up to and including April 2024 expressed as a % of the male average. "Average" is calculated in two ways, mean and median. The mean is the total male or female pay divided by the total number of males or females. The median is the pay received by the middle male or female when all hourly rates or bonuses are ranked in order.

Pay quartiles

Whilst a reduction in the mean hourly pay gap is reported when compared to April 2023, our figures show that average hourly pay for male employees remains higher than for female employees. This is due to a higher proportion of senior roles being occupied by men, creating the gap, and a significant higher proportion of lower paid administrative roles tending to be occupied by women. The gender pay gap demonstrates the overall difference in average earnings (mean and median) between men and women. This is not the same as equal pay, which is the difference between men and women carrying out the same role, similar roles or roles of equal value. Our policy is to pay men and women equally for doing equivalent jobs across our business.

Proportion of females and males receiving a bonus

We are a predominantly sales-focused business where commission is a key component of total pay. Whilst there is no significant difference in the opportunity to earn a bonus for males and females in equivalent roles, there is a higher proportion of males in the upper pay quartiles, where roles typically offer greater bonus opportunities. In addition, there is greater representation of females in the lower pay quartile, where roles would not typically attract a bonus opportunity. This distribution drives the overall bonus gap.

Chris Rosindale, Chief Operating Officer

For the purposes of gender pay gap reporting, 'pay' is calculated as an hourly rate (as at 5 April 2024).

In addition to basic salary, the hourly rate calculation includes a number of other payments e.g. specific allowances and monthly bonuses.
